Help to pilot assessment tools for the GMC

There have been assessment procedures for investigating poorly performing doctors for the last 12 years. The Academic Centre for Medical Education at UCL is working with the GMC to review these assessments.

To help us create a reliable and fair test, we are looking for fully registered doctors to take a written test and a 12 station OSCE. To be eligible, you must be FY2-Consultant level, and have worked in the specialty within the last year. Volunteers can only take this test once for each specialty.

All volunteers will receive feedback about their own performance. This is a valuable insight into methods of assessment for anyone interested in this area and excellent examination practice for those about to do postgraduate exams.

Participants will receive an honorarium of £350 plus (standard class) travel expenses and lunch.

Upcoming 2011 dates to be held at UCL Medical School, Archway, North London:

GP	Mon 20 May
GP	Tue 21 May

If you would like to take part, please email t.acme@medsch.ucl.ac.uk for more information and an application form.
