

Increase Your Effectiveness In Consultations (and reduce your risk)

Tuesday 11th October 2011
The Lane End Conference Centre, Marlow HP14 3HH
9.00am—4.30pm

There is an increasing research base to show which behaviours promote the effective use of time when clinicians interact with patients. Interestingly there is also some evidence about which behaviours lower medico-legal and clinical risk. Happily there is a significant overlap between them.

This full day seminar.....

- Explores the key evidence—using presentation and facilitated group discussion
- Uses a skills framework for improving consultations
- Engages learners in practical exercises to improve their skills
- Practices the identification and labelling of specific skills
- Rehearses the 'best buy' skills that increase effectiveness and reduce medico-legal and clinical risk
- Is aimed at doctors (all grades and specialities), nurses and allied clinicians
